How would I do that? A: Mysql has column level predicates. If not null or (column_name is not null then A: NULL is a database concept and is independant of the language the application is written in. So, NULL will be NULL regardless of the language/application that is running. However, NULL is considered to be a default so if a column doesn't have a value then you can specify that with a default value CREATE TABLE MyTable ( column1 INT NOT NULL, column2 INT DEFAULT NULL, ... ) Just keep in mind that NULL is used to indicate a missing value and should really only be used for columns that hold numbers, dates and types like VARCHAR, BINARY etc. The DEFAULT NULL is a sort of "do nothing" and will only be used if a column doesn't have a value otherwise it will simply be left blank. A: You can do this without specifying NULL in the column in the table. If column1 is not null, then do something. If column2 is not null, then do something else. If column3 is not null, then do something yet something more. by Russian President Vladimir Putin reportedly met with Fidel Castro in Havana, Cuba today, the New York Times reports.
